Facts about samurai

Samurai were Japanese warriors, an army created to protect the noble class from military clans who were fighting between themselves for power.

In 1868, Japan's feudal era came to an end, and the samurai class was abolished.

Their most famous weapon was a long sword called a Katana. It was their symbol.

A samurai believed his swords held his soul, so they were his most important possession.

To a samurai, death was better than having no honour.

Their training methods included meditation, judo and kendo.

There were samurai woman. They were expected to fight till the end and die with honor, just like the men.
